“Teenagers and Exam Classes”

The reality of an examination at the end of a course often has considerable implications for the motivation and behaviours of students. We will explore what these might be and examine strategies to minimise the negative effects, and exploit the positive. Though it often seems that in a teenage class, teachers and students are in opposition, they actually share the same needs: lessons that bring the class together and material that caters for an individual. Come and see how Exam Connections makes connections between students and teachers.

Uczestnicy wykładu otrzymają egzemplarz podręcznika Exam Connections 2.

“Student-centred technology”

It's not what you've got; it's the way that you use it. We will conduct a brief examination of how we can exploit the functionalities of technology to further enhance our own best teaching practice. In the presentation we will use examples from Matura Solutions and Exam Connections iTools.

“You can do it – motivating for basic matura”

As the saying goes ‘nothing succeeds like success’ and yet exam preparation is often so overwhelming for weaker students that they do not trust their abilities at all and lose the chance of getting a good result even before they sit the exam. Would this change if every lesson brought them a feeling of small achievement and steady progress? Possibly. But how to do it? Oxford Repetytorium for your students taking matura podstawowa provides the answer.

Uczestnicy wykładu otrzymają egzemplarz Oxford Repetytorium Matura Podstawowa.

Peter Redpath has taught children and/or trained teachers and teacher trainers in the U.K., Spain, Austria, Germany, Australia, India, Vietnam, Qatar, Libya, Sudan, Turkey and the UAE. He works as a freelance trainer and consultant. In addition to this, much of his time is given over to moderating and assessing Cambridge TESOL teacher training courses in Spain and Portugal. For nine years he was the Chief Assessor for Cambridge TESOL Teacher Training Courses in Spain and Portugal. In Spain, he has been providing short courses for primary and secondary teachers. Most recently he has co-authored a series of primary coursebooks for Oxford University Press.

Andrzej Butra is an experienced teacher, trainer and manager, who has been involved in the realm of English Language Teaching for over 25 years. His curriculum vitae includes being a Cambridge ESOL examiner and a speaker for leading publishers such as Oxford University Press. Always in love with modern teaching methods he is currently experimenting with interactive technology as a key method of 21st century learning and teaching development. Due to his market knowledge he works as a Director for Development and Training at Polanglo Sp. z o.o.
